Tell your child that you are going to say some words and that she will earn one point for each final consonant sound she identifies. Challenge your child to see how many points she can score in a minute. Then use an egg timer, a stopwatch, or the second hand on a clock to time your child as you say words that end in consonants—such as big, nut, and down. Make a tally mark on a sheet of paper for each correct answer, and later have your child add up her score.
